

Dear residents,

The University of Georgia is pleased to welcome the SEC Nation broadcast to Myers Quad in advance of Saturday's 7:30 p.m. football game against Alabama. SEC Nation is a live, nationally broadcast pregame show focused on college football.

Game days bring energy and pride to campus—but they also bring increased activity around our residence halls. That's why we're asking for your help in keeping our community safe and secure.

On Saturday, University Housing staff will check student IDs in key locations to ensure only residents and their accompanied guests may enter buildings. We ask for your patience as it might take longer to enter the community while we conduct the verification process--please have your UGA ID ready and keep it with you at all times.

All Athletic Association parking restrictions still apply. Visit tps.uga.edu/parking/football for a map of affected lots.

Creating a secure community is a collective effort. Here are a few more ways you can help:

- Always carry your UGA ID and room key.
  - Keep your room doors locked, even when you're inside.
  - Always escort your guests while in the building.
  - Keep exterior doors secured (not propped) to prevent non-residents from entering the building.
  - Be cautious when allowing others into the building—don't hold the door open for someone you don't recognize.
  - If someone follows you in and you're unsure about their presence, please call UGA Police, stop by the front desk or notify your RA.
  - Report any unusual behavior or concerns to police or housing staff.
- As we participate in the action this weekend, let's work together to keep the community secure and to show the nation how amazing the UGA community is. Have fun, stay safe and GO DAWGS!
